

Labour & Employment Law Highlights from 2016

By Terra Welsh and Alex Leaver

Member
LexMundi
World Ready

Lex Mundi is the world's leading network of independent law firms with in-depth experience in 100+ countries worldwide.

Labour and employment law had some interesting developments in 2016. What follows are a few highlights from the last year and an introduction to an issue that may attract significant attention in 2017.

The Supreme Court says no to without cause dismissals in the federal sector: In Wilson v. Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd.<sup>1</sup>, the Supreme Court of Canada held that federally regulated employees cannot be dismissed without just cause. Prior to Wilson, there were two diverging sets of authority as to whether a federally-regulated employer could dismiss a non-unionized employee without cause, with notice or compensation in lieu of notice. Wilson ended the debate and now, in effect, employees who fall under the unjust dismissal provisions of the Canada Labour Code have similar protections to those of unionized employees. A dismissed employee can pursue a complaint under the Canada Labour Code even if the employee received notice of the termination or compensation in lieu of notice. This serves as an additional reminder that employers should be diligent in documenting all employee misconduct and applying progressive discipline prior to termination to ensure that there is a sufficient evidentiary record to support a with cause dismissal when circumstances warrant.

The potential pitfalls of fixed-term contracts: In Howard v. Benson Group Inc. (The Benson Group Inc.)<sup>2</sup>, the Ontario Court of Appeal ordered an employer to pay a former employee 37 months of salary and benefits following termination - after only 23 months of employment. The Court of Appeal held that when the employer terminated a fixed term employment contract, without cause, and there was no enforceable provision for early termination without cause, the employee was entitled to the compensation that he would have received to the end of the employment contract. Additionally, the Court held that the employee had no duty to mitigate his damages. Leave to appeal the decision to the Supreme Court was dismissed in October. For a more fulsome review of the decision and its lessons for employers, please see: The Potential Pitfalls of Fixed-Term Employment Contracts by Terra Welsh.

No more automatic certifications in Manitoba: In November, the Manitoba government changed the certification process for forming a new bargaining unit. Prior to November, if a union was able to gather at least 65% support from within the proposed bargaining unit, no vote of the proposed members was required and the Labour Board automatically certified the unit. If a proposed bargaining unit had between 40% and 65% support, a vote was required. Now, the minimum threshold of 40% remains, but a certification vote by secret ballot is required regardless of the amount of support.

The Manitoba Human Rights Commission continues the upward trend in damage awards: While the MHRC is certainly not at the levels of the human rights commissions in British Columbia or Alberta, most recently, in Jedrzejewska, Chaudhry, and Chaudhry v. A+ Financial Services Ltd and Wayne McConnell, three complainants who were subjected to workplace harassment were each awarded $20,000 as damages for injury to dignity, feelings and self-respect. This presents a considerable escalation when considered in the context of the high-water marks of $7,750 in 2013 and $15,000 in 2014.

---

<sup>1</sup> 2016 SCC 29.

<sup>2</sup> 2016 ONCA 256.

New leaves under The Employment Standards Code: There were some significant amendments to the Code in 2016 relating to the addition of long-term leave for serious injury or illness, the extension of compassionate care leave, and the addition of domestic violence leave. For a more fulsome review of the amendments, please see: New Additions to *The Employment Standards Code* by Melissa Beaumont.

Not an employee or an independent contractor? Dependent contractor it is! In Keenan v. Canac Kitchens Ltd.<sup>3</sup>, the Ontario Court of Appeal considered the appropriate notice period for a married couple where the husband worked for 32 years and the wife worked for 25 years for Canac Kitchens. In 1987, eleven years after the husband had been employed by Canac Kitchens, the company informed the couple that they were changing their relationship from employees to contractors. They were required to devote their full time and attention to Canac and did so until 2006. In 2007, the Keenans started doing some work for a competitor of Canac, because Canac was providing less work. Canac ended the relationship in 2009 and provided no notice or payment whatsoever. The Court of Appeal concluded that the Keenans were “dependent contractors” because of the exclusivity of the relationship and, therefore, they were entitled to notice of the termination of their engagement. The Court found that exclusivity is to be determined by looking at the entire relationship between the parties and the Keenans’ recent work from an alternate source was insufficient to displace the average 28.5 years of service the Keenans had provided. The Keenans were awarded pay in lieu of 26 months of notice.

Marijuana in the workplace: The potential legalization of marijuana in 2017 will likely add an additional challenge to the already complex area of workplace drug and alcohol testing. Employers will need to turn their minds to whether their policies require amendment and whether the change in law will change their employees’ on-duty conduct. The legalization of marijuana will affect the criminality of the drug, but does not change the fact that marijuana is an impairing substance that is unacceptable in the workplace in normal circumstances. As always, employers will have an obligation to maintain a safe workplace while balancing the privacy interests of their employees.

Please click here to sign up for @TDSLAW, our quarterly e-newsletter.

---

<sup>3</sup> 2016 ONCA 79.

DISCLAIMER

This article is presented for informational purposes only. The content does not constitute legal advice or solicitation and does not create a solicitor client relationship. The views expressed are solely the authors' and should not be attributed to any other party, including Thompson Dorfman Sweatman LLP (TDS), its affiliate companies or its clients. The authors make no guarantees regarding the accuracy or adequacy of the information contained herein or linked to via this article. The authors are not able to provide free legal advice. If you are seeking advice on specific matters, please contact Keith LaBossiere, CEO & Managing Partner at kdl@tdslaw.com, or 204.934.2587. Please be aware that any unsolicited information sent to the author(s) cannot be considered to be solicitor-client privileged.

While care is taken to ensure the accuracy for the purposes stated, before relying upon these articles, you should seek and be guided by legal advice based on your specific circumstances. We would be pleased to provide you with our assistance on any of the issues raised in these articles.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Terra Welsh

Phone: 204.934.2383 | Email: tlw@tdslaw.com | Web: www.tdslaw.com/tlw

Terra's practice is focused in the areas of labour and employment law, administrative law, and civil litigation. She primarily provides advice to employers and employees on employment contracts, employee manuals, collective agreement administration, discipline, terminations, wrongful dismissals, employment standards, human rights issues, and workplace safety and health matters.

Alex Leaver

Phone: 204.934.2442 | Email: ahl@tdslaw.com | Web: www.tdslaw.com/ahl

Alex is a graduate of the University of Manitoba, receiving his J.D. in 2015.